

Walleye Hornberg

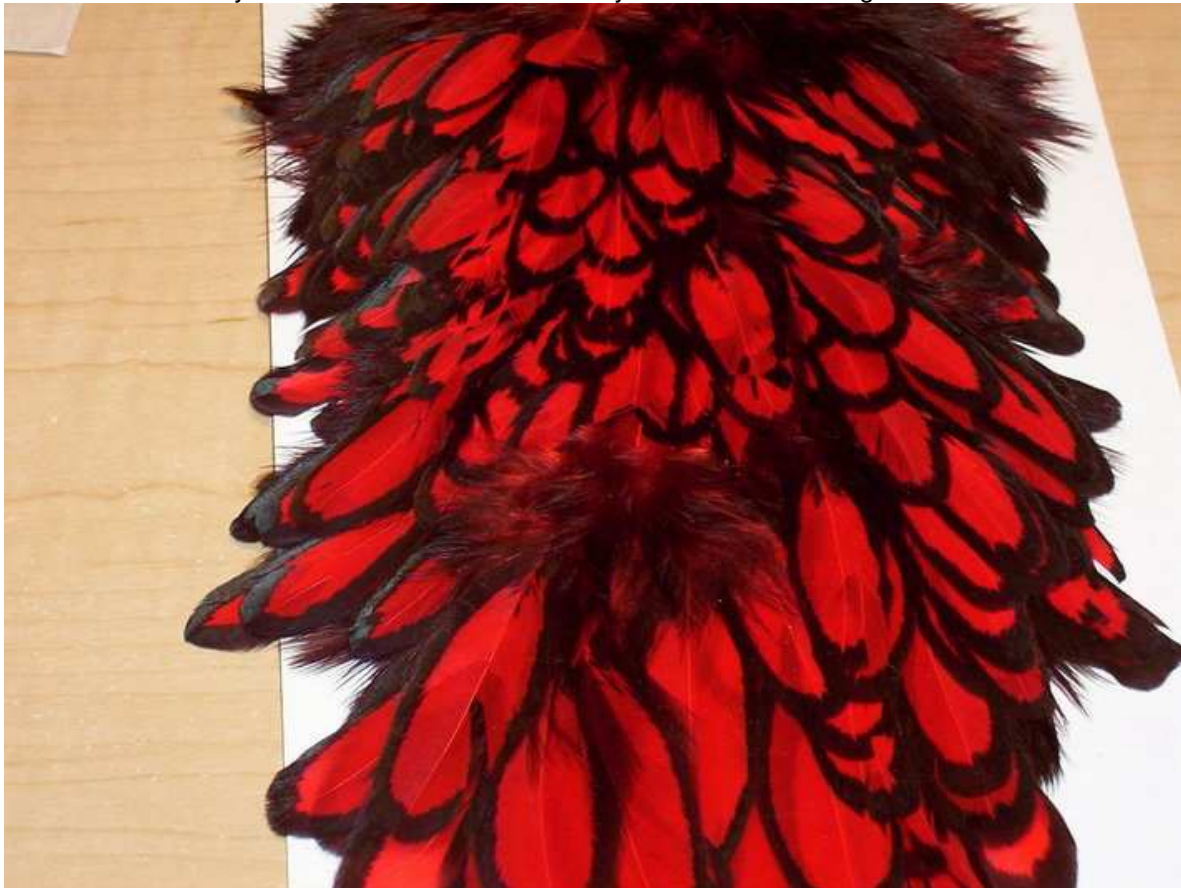

I made or stumbled (depending on ones point of view) on this fly last winter. Only after a few ties and fishing it successfully did I find out I had it all wrong 😊

I had great success with this fly with walleyes being strangely attracted to it and the basic designed is Hornbergesque.

On the Discovery Channel (after my success with this fly) I found out that fish can't see red.

I do not know whether they see red as another colour or if it is invisible to them. Either way it works.

It started with this dyed hen saddle that said to me "you can do something with this"

1.
Start thread on an 2/0 saltwater hook

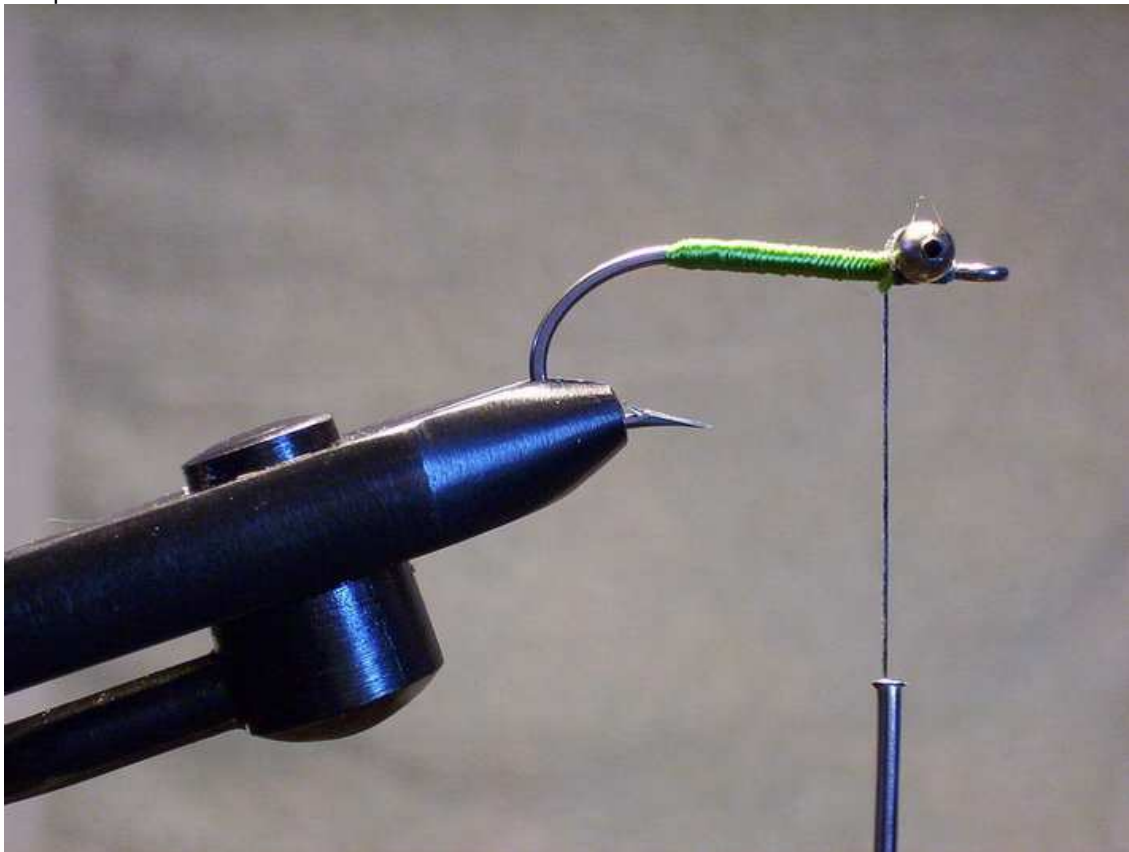

2.
Tie in some bead chain eyes

3.
Tie in some Floss (in this case I am using emerald green)

4.
Wrap it forward

5.
Some Tinsel

6.
Two matching Blue Dun dyed Chinese cape hackle tips tied on the opposite sides of the shank

7.

Our Dyed Hen Cape 2 matching feather tips on either side of the shank

8.
Some stiff dry fly hackle that can maybe move a bit of water
